Introduction

INTRODUCTION FROM RICHARD LEONARD, SCOTTISH LABOUR LEADER

The Summer of Socialism campaign is an opportunity for us as a Party to get our positive message of hope out to the people of Scotland and build our grassroots movement for real change.

This campaign pack has everything you need to get involved and get active in your community. It includes our key messages, our radical policies to transform Scotland, campaign materials and guidance on how you can build support for your campaign activities in your community.

We know that poverty is rising and the gap between the rich and the poor is widening. Too many people are in insecure low paid work, too many pensioners are having to choose between heating and eating, and all across Scotland our local services like schools and hospitals are starved of the investment they need.

We need to face the future, not by continuing as we are, but by bringing about real and positive change.

That is why, this summer, we need to get out campaigning across Scotland to win support for our plans to build a more secure and equal Scotland.

We don't need a referendum to do that: it is about everyone having a secure job with a living wage of at least £10 per hour, a warm affordable home and support for people and families in their time of need. We want a compassionate society where we invest in the future of all our people, and a rebalanced economy where we plan more and leave less to the market.

There is a new choice in Scotland and it couldn't be clearer: Labour's positive plan for investment and jobs or another decade of insecurity and cuts from the SNP and the Tories.

The Labour Party is once again the Party offering people hope: let's be confident in our message and win people over to our cause.

OVERVIEW

What is the Summer of Socialism campaign?

The Summer of Socialism campaign is an opportunity to take our positive message of hope out onto the doorsteps across the country and talk about our radical plans to transform Scotland.

We are campaigning on a number of themes over the summer - the NHS, education, jobs and the economy, housing, transport and the cost of living. While we are campaigning on these themes on a week by week basis, you can pick and choose one or two themes which are prominent in your local community and campaign on these over the coming weeks.

NHS 70, 5-7 July

Our National Health Service is 70 this year. Labour founded the NHS and will always be the party that defends it.

To help us celebrate we have invited every CLP to organise a Birthday Party, support a community event or host a street stall on Saturday 7 July in support of our NHS and staff. There is more information on how you can get involved on page 13 of this pack.

Dump Trump, 13-14 July

Donald Trump will visit Britain soon – and Scottish Labour is helping to lead the protests.

When Richard stood to be Scottish Labour leader he said that if Trump visited the party would stand in opposition to him. Now is the time to mobilise.

Richard will be joining the protests in Glasgow and Edinburgh when Trump is here, on the 13th and 14th of July. Please come along and ensure that Scottish Labour has a big contingent on Friday night in Glasgow and on Saturday in Edinburgh.

ABOUT THIS CAMPAIGN PACK

This campaign pack includes everything you will need to run a great summer campaign. The aims of the campaign are to:

1. Spread the word about our positive vision of hope and our radical plan to transform Scotland.
2. Build support among local members, supporters, community organisers and members of the public for the campaign.
3. Encourage as many people as possible to get involved in your local campaign and their local Labour Party.

To deliver these goals, we need as many local Labour parties as possible to mobilise their members and get involved in the Summer of Socialism campaign. That is why the third section of this campaign pack has suggestions for how you can organise and build support for your local campaign through different community networks. This campaign is also a vital opportunity to engage with the thousands of new members who have joined the party over the last year and get them out campaigning.

We are offering every CLP 2,500 'Real Change' tabloid newspapers. There is also a range of thematic leaflets on health, industrial strategy, housing, council cuts and transport, which are available on a first come first served basis. You can request your free campaign materials by emailing scotland@labour.org.uk.

The best local campaigns will use all the communication channels - doorstep, print, newspapers and social media. Each of these channels support and compliment the other.

KEY MESSAGES

Scottish Labour is the party of real change, for the many, not the few. This is no time to tinker around the edges. We need real change, not just more of the same: a more equal Scotland – with higher investment, better public services and where the broadest shoulders bear the biggest burden.

The dividing line in Scotland is now between Labour’s plan to invest and build an economy that works for the many, not the few, or further austerity with the SNP and the Tories.

Wealth in Scotland has now surpassed £1 trillion, and the Resolution Foundation warns that it is not being taxed effectively enough. They are right, which is why we will argue that the very richest should pay their fair share and put wealth back to work for the many.

Only Labour will ask the richest to pay their fair share and implement an industrial strategy that delivers economic growth from the foundations up, which is why Scottish Labour is developing a law to give workers the right to buy a business when it is put up for sale or facing closure. Because the creators of the wealth should be able to own the wealth that they create.

Nicola Sturgeon promised the people of Scotland a growth commission, but all we got was a cuts commission. Even the SNP itself now admits separation would mean a decade of unprecedented austerity and a race to the bottom on corporation tax and workers’ rights – a view confirmed by independent experts such as the Institute for Fiscal Studies.

Scotland can have real change with Labour. That means:

- ✓ A plan for industry to create good jobs and a growing economy
- ✓ Better housing for all – build new council homes and control private rents
- ✓ A real living wage of £10 an hour and a ban on zero hour contracts
- ✓ A new deal for pensioners and oppose any moves to cut the bus pass
- ✓ Increased funding for our NHS and a fair pay deal for all public sector workers
- ✓ Make the wealthiest pay their fair share to invest in schools and hospitals.
- ✓ Action on the cost of living - including raising Child Benefit by £260 a year
- ✓ Public ownership of public services like buses and trains, to put people before profit
- ✓ A stronger, radical, Scottish Parliament within the UK, not ten more years of austerity

SUMMER CAMPAIGN TIMELINE

We are campaigning on a number of themes over the summer - the NHS; education; jobs and the economy; housing; transport and the cost of living.

While we are campaigning on these themes on a week by week basis, you can pick and choose one or two themes which are prominent in your local community and campaign on these over the coming weeks.

A range of thematic leaflets are available to help you campaign and don't forget to add your events to our events calendar so we can let members know how they can get involved. Add your events at labour.org.uk/addevent

Week 1 : NHS at 70

Labour established the NHS based on need, not ability to pay. A decade of Tory austerity and SNP mismanagement has left our NHS undervalued, under resourced and under too much pressure. Labour will deliver the resources our health service needs by making the richest and big business pay their fair share.

Week 2: Cost of living

The SNP claim the fundamentals of our economy are strong, but for too many people the economy is fundamentally broken. While the rich are getting richer, the rest of us are just one big unexpected bill away from being in real trouble. Labour will take action on the cost of living by introducing a £10 per hour real living wage; increasing child benefit for families; reforming council tax and capping energy bills.

Week 3: Jobs and the economy

Labour has a bold plan for industry to deliver the high wage, high skill jobs Scotland needs in the 21st century. We won't sit back and let the profit margins of big business dictate whether jobs come to our communities. Instead we'll use an industrial strategy to ensure working people have a greater share of the wealth they create.

Week 4: Environment, transport and animal welfare

We believe in public ownership of our public transport. That's why we want to nationalise the railways and bring our buses back into public ownership. This move won't just benefit passengers with fairer ticket prices but also our planet, as we have to take more steps to tackle the big challenge of this generation – climate change.

Week 5: Justice, police and keeping people safe

You can't keep people safe on the cheap, but the SNP's botched merger of Police Scotland has more often than not been a cover for cuts - especially backroom staff who do vital, life saving work. Labour would deliver the resources our Police service needs and more local accountability for communities.

Week 6: Education

Education is what empowers us all to realise our full potential. When it fails, it isn't just the individual that is held back, but all of us. Labour wants to see an end to the cuts and proper investment in our schools, starting with a fair deal for our teachers. We need to deliver better financial support for students at college and university and ensure the opportunity to learn is a lifelong privilege.

Week 7: Housing

Home is at the heart of all of our lives. It's the foundation on which we raise our families; the bedrock for our dreams and aspirations. But for too many people, the housing pressures they face are getting worse not better. Labour will fix our broken housing market by reforming the private rented sector to ensure fair rents, and building more council homes for social rent. We'll stop households on over £100,000 a year getting state support to buy a home through 'help to buy' by reviewing the scheme.

Week 8: Culture

Everyone should have the opportunity to take part in arts and sport, not just those who can afford it. That's why Labour will properly fund local services to ensure people get access to cultural activities.

Week 9: Making Scotland fairer

Today in Scotland the top 1% own as much wealth as the bottom 50% put together. That simply has to change. Labour will make Scotland a fairer country by redistributing wealth, power and opportunity from the few into the hands of the many. We'll make the richest pay their fair share and tackle poverty and inequality

BUILDING A MOVEMENT FOR THE MANY

Dear Friend,

I am delighted to be able to support Labour's positive vision for Scotland.

Unlike other political parties, Labour has a clear anti-austerity message.

We stand for investment in our people and communities, our public services and our industry.

Our plans under a Labour Government at Westminster will provide an additional £70bn investment for Scotland.

This money will boost and grow the Scottish economy, create jobs and provide the additional resources for our under pressure public services and investment in Scotland's infrastructure.

I am proud of the vision we have for a fairer, more caring, more equal and more just society that works for the many and not just the few.

Join Labour and let us together deliver a Labour Government at Westminster and another at Holyrood, with Richard Leonard as your First Minister, and together we will bring about Real Change.

Organising your campaign in your local area

PLANNING YOUR CAMPAIGN

We advise you to pick one or two of the Summer of Socialism campaign themes and campaign on them over the summer.

There are many ways to run a local campaign, below is a suggested model campaign plan you may wish to follow.

Step 1 - build support

- Contact every member of your CLP and let them know about the campaign and how they can get involved.
- Contact local community groups and other potential campaign partners to join the campaign or organise similar local campaigns. For example, there may be existing campaigns focusing on local NHS and social care funding issues or a school.
- Publicise your campaign and what you are trying to achieve.
- Build support around your campaign through both printed communications and social media.

Step 2 - your campaign

- Run a street stall or campaign sessions where you discuss one of the key Summer of Socialism campaign themes
- Continue to raise awareness of your local campaign through social media channels
- See if the local paper is interested in your campaign

Step 3 - follow up

- Contact everyone who took part in the campaign thanking them.
- Remind members and supporters of upcoming training and campaign events.
- Hold a thank you or social event.

ENGAGING NEW MEMBERS AND SUPPORTERS

The Summer of Socialism campaign is a great opportunity to engage the thousands of new members and supporters who have joined the party over the past year, as well as longstanding members looking for a specific campaign to get involved in.

Many new members have never been campaigning before and may lack the confidence to just show up to a campaign event. So for this campaign in particular, it's worth taking the time to give members who have never done any campaigning before some support to make sure they're confident and able to get involved.

Local Campaign Training

A great way to mobilise both new and longstanding members is to organise a specific local campaign training session. Here's how:

- 1. Book a venue – this could be your local party office, where you normally hold meetings, a local community centre, or another good local venue. Ensure the venue is accessible for disabled people.
- 2. Email your members about the campaign and explain that you are putting on a local training session for all members who want to be involved.
- 3. Follow up with phone calls, particularly focusing on new members. People are far more likely to come to an event if they have been personally invited.
- 4. Run your campaign training session. A model structure for the session is on the next page.
- 5. At the end of the session, make sure everyone has given you their contact details and committed to come along to an upcoming campaign event.

MODEL OUTLINE FOR YOUR SUMMER OF SOCIALISM CAMPAIGN TRAINING SESSION

Time	Event
7.30pm	Welcome and introduction <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Thank everyone for coming along and explain the structure of the evening. • First, we're going to go through a quick briefing on the Summer of Socialism campaign themes. • Next, we're going to talk about the key campaign activities we'll be doing locally and how you can get involved. • Finally, we're going to practice speaking to voters on the doorstep about the campaign.
7.40pm	Political briefing <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Brief members about Labour's positive message of hope and real change - for the many not the few, using the 'Key Messages' material at the start of this pack. • Allow time for questions at the end, but emphasise that the goal of this event is to brief and train activists to get involved in the campaign. • If you have a local Labour MSP, MP or councillor, you may wish to ask them to lead on this part of the training.
7.55pm	Local campaigning Set out what local campaign events you will be organising locally. These could include: Local street stalls You may want to organise street stalls in local precincts or shopping centres to further raise the profile of your local campaign. Make sure your street stall is clearly branded as 'Labour' with balloons and correx boards, which you can buy from the campaign shop shop.labour.org.uk. The job of volunteers on a street stall is to go up and talk to people as they walk past, hand out leaflets, sign people up as members and ask people to get involved in the Summer of Socialism campaign. Running door-knocking sessions A vital part of local Labour campaigning is knocking on doors, talking to people about issues they are concerned about and collecting Voter ID information. As part of that conversation, we can also ask people to sign up to the Labour Party. Delivering leaflets about the campaign Set out how many leaflets we need to deliver and who to contact to pick up a round. You could also bring some rounds with you for people to take away from the session. Set out a clear timetable for the campaigning sessions you are organising for this campaign. You might also want to put all the sessions on a small flyer for people to take away.
8.15pm	Practical training Ask members to split into pairs and practice talking through the key themes of the campaign. One person plays the Labour volunteer, the other plays a voter. Let them go through the conversation a few times, then get the participants to switch roles. The goal at the end of the conversation is to get someone to sign up to the campaign. Remember if you are practicing a conversation on the doorstep, we should aim to collect Voter ID information as well.
8.30pm	Training sessions ends

ADVERTISING CAMPAIGN EVENTS ONLINE

All of your campaign sessions and events should be added to the Labour Party events tool so we can let members know how they can get involved. To create a local event, go to: labour.org.uk/addevent

It's a quick and simple process – you just need to put in when the event is happening, what it is, and the meeting point. After you create an event, it will be checked by the Scottish Labour Party office before it appears on events.labour.org.uk

If you ever need an event to appear quickly, contact the Scottish Labour Organising team using the details in Section 4.

Your local campaign bulletin

A weekly email to all members advertising upcoming campaigning events is a quick and easy way to raise awareness that your local Labour Party is active and campaigning. When advertising campaigning sessions, remember:

- Start with a thank you to everyone who came out last time.
- Make it friendly for first timers. Explain that even if you've never been door knocking before, that's not a problem; you can go round with someone else first to see how it's done.
- Include the time, date and meeting point for the session. It's usually helpful to include a postcode for a meeting point. If you're meeting on a street, specify a junction or corner between two roads – that makes sure people meet at the right end of the street!
- Include a mobile number for the person running the session in case anyone arrives late.
- Ask people to RSVP. This will make it easier for people to say whether they are coming along or not and allow you to plan for the right number of people.

Phoning your members

A weekly email is useful, but without personal follow up it probably won't yield massive returns. For most people to choose to get involved in a campaign, they need an element of personal contact. If you are organising a campaigning event in a particular ward, phone all the members of that ward and personally ask them if they are able to come along. Even if they can't make it, take the time to ask them about their own motivations for joining the Labour Party and whether there is any other way they would like to contribute.

ENGAGING COMMUNITY GROUPS, LOCAL TRADE UNIONS AND THE PUBLIC

Through the Summer of Socialism campaign you can campaign on a number of different policy areas – including the economy, the NHS, education. In order to run a successful local campaign we need to identify existing or potential community leaders – people in a community and leaders of local trade unions who can bring other people with them to take part in the campaign.

These community networks could be:

- Local business leaders
- Carers associations
- Mother and toddler groups
- Local trade union branches
- Disability groups
- Patients groups
- GPs
- Faith groups
- Students' union groups
- Facebook groups or other online networks for particular groups
- Leaders of social enterprises
- Local charity leaders

Organising One-to-Ones

Once you have identified a number of potential community leaders, arrange a time to meet up with them and have a one-to-one.

A one-to-one is not a chat. Although it is by nature an organic conversation, there are certain key elements it's useful to have in mind for you to cover. A successful one-to-one results in an agreed action. In the context of the Summer of Socialism campaign this would usually be the member or supporter agreeing to mobilise their network to campaign on a certain policy area of the campaign.

The key elements of a good one-to-one conversation are:

- Start the conversation by explaining why you have invited them – that the Labour Party is running a new campaign about Labour's positive vision of real change for Scotland.
- Once you've explained why you have called the meeting, ask the person you are talking with about themselves. Ask them open and unchallenging questions to encourage them to talk and to set them at ease. For example, why did they get involved in their community organisation?
- Talk about the relationships they have, both within their own community group and with others. Would any of their members be interested in campaigning on the NHS and social care or schools?

- If the answer is no, that's OK. There may be other potential issues or campaigns that it may be better to follow up with this group.
- If they ask you about yourself, the Party or politics, tell them your views but always remain open and inclusive. Don't dismiss their ideas.
- At the end of the meeting, aim for an agreement with the person for them to bring people they know along to a campaign meeting.

Meeting with members of the group

By now, through a combination of meeting community leaders, door-knocking and direct mail, and discussions with local trade unions, you should have a number of people who are interested in one or more areas of the Summer of Socialism campaign. You may wish to call a meeting of those groups who have expressed an interest.

At this meeting explain the campaign. Ask people to share their stories in relation to the campaign theme and encourage local residents to get involved with the Labour Party.

At the end of the meeting, plan how you're going to take the campaign forward, and get more people involved.

ON THE DOORSTEP

Campaigning on the doorstep remains the single most effective way for a local party to get Labour's message across and build a long term relationship with local residents.

As part of this campaign, you should be organising regular door-knocking sessions.

If you have not already done so, you should make sure someone in your CLP is able to run reports off Contact Creator.

Use the 'Recommended Scottish Doorstep Voter ID' report to create and run off Voter ID sheets that list target voters to speak to.

The full Voter ID script and the codes you can input onto a Voter ID sheet can be found at members.labour.org.uk/campaigntechnology

At the start of your doorstep session:

1. Brief your activists on Labour's key message of hope and real change using the information in the 'key messages' section of this pack.
2. Go through a quick summary of the key questions to ask in a doorstep conversation.
3. Make sure every activist has enough local calling cards or Labour Party flyers about the campaign.

DIGITAL CAMPAIGNING

Digital media should be used alongside your printed communications to further raise awareness and promote your summer campaign. You can use social media to fulfil two distinct roles: mobilising your members and sharing your campaign message with voters.

There are a number of ways that digital can help your campaign.

Labour events tool

Remember to use the Labour events tool labour.org.uk/addevent to advertise events so we can let members know how to get involved locally.

Social media

You should also promote your Summer of Socialism campaign through different social media channels. Remember all your social media activity should point your supporters to join a campaign session or visit relevant content online at scottishlabour.org.uk.

Here are some top tips on using social media

1. Make sure your content is relevant, engaging and frequent.

Facebook

- If you can, post once a day.
- People are usually on Facebook when they're on their way to work (8-10am) and after work (6-8pm) so try to post then to hit the biggest audience.
- Keep it concise – aim for no more than 100 words per post. You can link to a website/blog/YouTube account to elaborate. Longer form posts are good too, as long as they're broken down and clear – like a list.
- Always include a video, picture, web link or graphic in your posts.
- Why not ask your followers a question and start a discussion?

Remember - people share content online when it elicits humour, urgency or a sense pride in their values.

Twitter

- Be informal and relaxed – Twitter is all about personality.
- Be punchy and succinct –keep your call to action at the front of your mind when tweeting.
- Tweet 3-6 times a day with your own content, and retweet relevant content from MSPs, MPs, councillors, local members, local businesses etc.
- Like Facebook, try not to post content without an image, video, web link.
- Utilise #SummerOfSocialism so people can feel like they're part of something bigger and get on board. Make sure you use it consistently and get members to do so too. That way you can find content to retweet easily.
- Start conversations on Twitter – ask schools, local businesses, faith organisations etc to meet with you, retweet your content, or thank them for their time.

Remember – putting out too much content can have a negative effect too. It's better to post less frequently but with high quality content than post for the sake of it!

2. Grow your audience

It's important that you're not only talking to Labour activists, family and friends, so you want to grow your audience as much as you can.

- Use hashtags to join conversations that are being had by people in your area, or to comment upon national issues.
- Ask people to tag you on Facebook or Twitter whenever they can – if you've met them on the doorstep, if they're a supporter, if they've been in touch via email – they can share support by telling their friends.
- Create Facebook events for campaign events or meetings– invite everyone you know and encourage them to invite their friends too.

- If you have a particularly important post which you'd like more people to see, add something like "Agree with me? Please share this post" so supporters know it's a key time to get the message out.

Digital advertising

If you have some remaining budget, you may want to do some targeted online advertising using Promote. For more information the Promote manual can be downloaded from members.labour.org.uk/campaigntechnology
